Dear Friends,

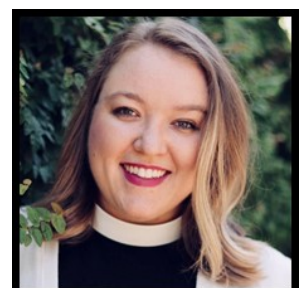

I had the privilege of attending a workshop in mid-July on spiritual disciplines. My friend and colleague, The Rev. David McElwain, put this on at the diocesan office, and I was asked to attend along with a few of the other clergy in the diocese. Over two days we talked about different ways we make room for God to enter our lives and speak to us, and how we can do this through different exercises and practices. The six practices we discussed over the two days included silence, contemplation, examen, fasting, gratitude, and journaling (you will get to know these better come Lent!). We were given overnight homework, tasked to take one of the disciplines out into the world with an assignment to practice silence. We were dismissed mid-afternoon with instructions not to speak and to try and be in silence as best we could until we broke silence the next morning. We were invited back to the diocese that evening to share dinner together and we ate in silence, cleaned up in silence, and departed in silence. It was difficult, not just for the extroverts among us, but because we all enjoy being together.

We found, too, however, that it was also incredibly holy to just be with one another, then to leave and get in a quiet car with no music and go to a quiet place and be intentional about silence was also beautiful. I always put on a book to listen to or music in the morning when I get ready, but that next morning, I kept my silence and made more room for prayer and contemplation than I already do in my routine. When we eventually broke our silence, I felt like I had pressed one giant reset button in my soul.

We are constantly bombarded with sound and noise and news and words and the cacophony of the world around us that all tend to press in on us and drown out the still, small voice of God who is always trying to call to us from within and without. When was the last time you slowed down, stopped, took a deep breath and really listened for that voice? When the crowds pressed in around Jesus and his energy was constantly being depleted by those who were desperate for healing and exorcism, he would often go up the mountain or away to a quiet place by himself to pray. This was how he managed the incredible stress and responsibility placed upon him and reconnected with the one who handed it to him: Taking to quiet places and heeding quiet moments where he could listen for God's will and realign and restore before continuing his mission.

When you feel overwhelmed, stressed, angry, or upset, when the noise presses in on you and threatens to suffocate you, take a moment and find a quiet place. Leave your phone somewhere else and settle in for just five or ten minutes of silence. You'll be surprised at how long that feels, but the quiet is an invitation for God to fill space and draw close.

Jesus sets an example for us every time he steals away for a moment alone; every time he sits down to break bread with not just the multitudes, but a few; every time he lies down and sleeps, even in the tempest. You deserve to press the reset button when you need to, too, wherever and whenever you can. Try it this month and let me know where you find opportunities for silence or quiet, to listen, to reset. For some, that might look like being out in the garden or up on the mountain; for others, perhaps it may look like sitting with a cup of tea or coffee in the early morning hours; maybe it really does look like a nap or a few moments to close your eyes and just breathe and relax.

My friend and a priest in the diocese, The Rev. Roxanne Friday, who also attended the workshop, told me out of her tribe's wisdom, "Remember, you were given two ears and one mouth, that you might listen twice as much as you speak."

Happy quieting,
Rev. Camie

Medical Equipment for your use

We have come into quite a lot of medical equipment and items for hospital beds recently. If you or someone you know is in need of items such as: wheel chairs, walkers, canes, crutches, shower benches, bed rails, hospital bed sheets, toilet seat bars, urinals (new), or things of that nature, please contact the office at 234-0831. These items are very hard to find second hand & very expensive if you buy them new.

Mark Your Calendar for September 7th!

Our friends at Our Saviour's Lutheran Church are hosting a build for Sleep in Heavenly Peace. We will be helping to build beds, providing refreshments for builders, checking in volunteers, and connecting with other churches in the downtown area. There will be a lot more information to come over the summer. It will be a great event!
